Participant Feedback	IAS Response
The volume was a bit much for the time period to cover and have meaningful discussion. Might consider making it a 2 and a half day course instead. Or 3 X 6 hour days.	Good comments. Larry has been asked to have a look at a suitable split for the time available.
Minor administrative comments: the ppt still used old IAS logo	Larry has been asked to modify the slides.
This was a remote training seminar. Very difficult for the presenter/trainer to gauge participant understanding (without classroom - direct face-to-face contact) and for presenter to drive discussion – as participants were not present for discussion and interaction.	Noted. One of the difficulties of our current social distancing restriction is the need to deliver training only online.

Other comments:

- Love Larry-there is no one like him!
- Larry's experience shines through the training. His experience with this program and dob is helpful during discussions. I learn something new from Larry during each interaction.
- Great course with very helpful techniques to get accredited easier.
- It is a tough challenge to do this webinar remotely and with a variety of students with differing backgrounds. Overall it was good. There was some redundancy but that helps to drive points home.
- While I understood most of the course, there were some things I didn't know as I'm not an engineer which is why I lowered the material and complexity. I very much learned a lot from this course.
- The presenter's knowledge on the training topics were highly commendable. The training session was very informative. Presenter ensured that all attendees are comfortable throughout the presentation by encouraging regular interactions between attendees which also added value to the presentation. All our doubts during the training were resolved instantly with adequate clarity.
- This course was very helpful and provided me the opportunity to grasp and understand the importance of the IAS Accreditation. More so, the importance of understanding the context of the applicable codes. I would most definitely take this seminar/webinar with Mr. O'Connor again.
